OUR COAST DEFENCES.

A Re-organization of the British War Department.

The Unfortunate Collision at Mitchellstown, Ireland.

OTTAWA, Sept. 10.—General Lord Alexander Russell, commanding the British troops in Canada, will arrive here to-morrow to consult with the Dominion Government regarding the proposed changes in strengthening the coast defences of the Dominion. There are many conjectures as to the motive which has prompted the Imperial Government to this hurried line of action. To casual observers there appears no immediate danger, yet there must be something underlying, which has prompted the British Government to take extra precautionary measures as suggested.

ARMY RE-ORGANIZATION.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The re-organization scheme announced last night is a revolution. It practically makes Gen. Wolseley Secretary of State for War without parliamentary responsibility and leaves the present Secretary with financial control of the whole war office divided into civil and war departments. The latter has entire control of the army organization, while the former simply checks accounts. This no doubt means increased efficiency for the army, but the principle of individual responsibility strictly enforced will almost certainly lead to friction between the military and civil departments. The army will be in the hands of the great heads of the departments, against whom the Secretary for war and the Financial Secretary will have to struggle for economy.

THE CROWN JEWELS.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The sale of the Crown jewels, it is now officially stated, has produced a net sum of 7,000,252 francs and 50 centimes.

TO RELEASE THE SEALERS.

LONDON, Sept. 9.—In the House of Commons this evening Mr. Gourley, the wealthy ship owner and member for Sunderland, asked the government whether it was true the Pathfinder, a Canadian vessel, had arrived at a port of British Columbia with 3,000 seal skins, having eluded the American cruisers.

Sir J. Ferguson replied that the Foreign Department had no knowledge of the proceedings of the Pathfinder. He could only say that if she was not sealing or fishing within three miles of the American coast, the government would hold her not liable to seizure. The department has received reports of seizures in all, three last season and four during the present season. The American Government had agreed to release the vessels and their crews, reserving for future settlement the questions involved.

BLOODSHED IN IRELAND.

DUBLIN, Sept. 9.—During the O'Brien indignation meeting at Mitchellstown to-day a collision occurred between the police and citizens in which one man was killed and over 200 were wounded. Messrs. Labouchere, Dillon, Brunner, Ellis and Condon, members of Parliament, were present to address the meeting. Before the speaking had begun a squad of twenty police vainly tried to break the meeting up. They attacked the people with their batons and a free fight ensued, in which the police were worsted. They then retired to their barracks for assistance. On their departure Mr. Dillon began his speech but he had not proceeded far when the police, strongly reinforced, returned to the charge, using the butts of their rifles. The onslaught was fierce, but it was as fiercely met, the mounted farmers present riding into the fray and going into the fight. After a time the police were again driven back to their barracks into which they retreated. Then from windows and doors came a volley directed at a group who were watching the fighting from the bottom of the square. John Reardon was shot dead and two others were wounded by the volley. One of these, John Shinnock, died soon afterwards. In all, 54 police and 150 civilians were wounded. It is not known who ordered them to fire. Immediately after the firing Messrs. Labouchere and Dillon rushed into the barracks and asked that the men's rifles be examined in order to determine who had fired. This was refused. The people dipped their handkerchiefs in the blood of the victims. Part of Shinnock's skull still lies in the market place where he fell.

THE NILE OVERFLOWS.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A dispatch from Egypt to-day regarding the rise of the Nile is causing increased alarm. Many estates on the right bank of the river are ruined. The crop in many places being now nearly ripe is irretrievably destroyed. Thus famine is imminent. At Boulat a high wall, three feet thick, constructed between the railway and the river, which was supposed to be equal to any emergency has given way. The villages around Luxor are destroyed; Luxor itself is seriously damaged. Telegraphic communication with Upper Egypt is interrupted.

THE MOBILIZATION.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—At the conclusion of the sham fight to-day Gen. Ferron conferred upon Gen. Clement the decoration of Commander of the Legion of Honor.

The mobilization experiment necessitated the raising of the 17th army corps from 10,000 to 36,750. The officers were somewhat bothered in handling a larger body of men than they were accustomed to and the artillery movements were sluggish.

THE MITCHELLSTOWN RIOT.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—All was quiet throughout the night at Mitchellstown, the scene of yesterday's rioting. All persons who attended yesterday's meeting have returned to their homes. Fifty-four constables were injured to such an extent that physicians services are required. One hundred and fifty civilians are also injured. The town to-day is quiet.

WANTING INFORMATION.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—In the House of Commons to-day Jno. E. Gibson, Solicitor General for Ireland, in reply to an interrogatory by Sexton, said that the government did not have sufficient information to make a statement relative to the trouble at Mitchelstown yesterday. Upon receiving this answer to his question, Sexton said, "I shall resist any progress of the Appropriation bill until the government gives the desired information." [Parnellite cheers.]

STEAMER LOST.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The steamer Endymoin, which arrived yesterday, had on board the crew of the British bark Orgnell, from Barrow for Perth Amboy, which was abandoned in a sinking condition.

COWICHAN LAKE.

Sportsman's Paradise--Splendid Agricultural Land.

Mr. W. A. Robertson returned last night from an extended trip to Cowichan Lake. The road leading from Duncan's Station to the Lake is being overhauled and put in thorough repair. It is now in fit condition for a buggy to pass through to Green's hotel. In Cowichan the harvest was about over. The breadth under crop this season was larger than ever before, and the yield exceptionally good. In this district, especially around the Lake, a large number of new settlers have gone in this year. They are arranging for the erection of dwellings and outhouses during the fall and winter. There are large areas of excellent land to be taken up in that section. Its proximity to the railway and the excellent roads leading thereto makes the locality a very desirable one for settlement. Mr. Robertson will only be too happy to instruct anyone wishing to visit that part in quest of land how to reach it, and where to select the most desirable land now in the market. Along the road to the Lake he found grouse, deer and bear abundant, whilst the Lake abounds with excellent fishing. At Green's hotel the very best of accommodation is to be obtained, likewise boats for fishing or excursion trips at reasonable rates. The distance from the lake to Duncan's station is 20 miles. Conveyances meet trains at stated periods during the week. Mr. Robertson knows no where else where such a pleasant time can be enjoyed, and those visiting it will find the Lake and Green's hotel a veritable sportsman's paradise.

Blaine's Starring Tour in Europe ---Another Defaulter.

Powderly to Resign---Railway Collision in Nebraska.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—Recorder Smith received a telegram yesterday from San Francisco from J. B. Hart, attorney for the celebrated Kissane, asking the Recorder to have the indictment against Kissane dismissed. The Recorder has not replied, and probably will not.

STUCK BY HIS POST.

SISSUN, Cala., Sept. 10.—A special train, containing native sons and daughters returning from the Napa celebration this morning ran off the track near the depot. No one was hurt except the fireman, Ed Lake, who sprained his ankle in jumping from the engine. Chas. Orr, engineer, stuck to his post, reversing the engine, thus saving life. The main track was torn up for 200 feet.

A RAILWAY COLLISION.

HASTINGS, Neb., Sept. 10.—Early this morning a frightful smash-up occurred here by a collision of the St. Joe and Grand Island train with the Burlington and Missouri way freight, at the crossing of the two roads. The freight engine was thrown into a ditch, burying with it E. Fuller, engineer, who was taken out alive, but so badly injured that he will probably die. The passenger train tumbled over an embankment with the cars piled up in a heap. John S. Mendenburg, aged 70, one of the passengers, was mortally cut and wounded. Many other passengers were badly injured.

ANOTHER DEFAULTER.

SANTA FE, Sept. 10.—A rumor is in circulation this morning that the ex-warden of the penitentiary, Thos. H. Gable, had been found short in his accounts to the extent of $150,000.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—A well known Democrat here is in receipt of a letter from President Cleveland, in which the latter declares that if he runs for a second term the ticket must be made up to suit him.

POWDERLY WILL RESIGN.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 10.—H. H. Bengaugh, a close personal friend of General Master Workman Powderly, to-day received information which leaves no doubt in his mind that Powderly will tender his resignation at the Minneapolis convention, and that he will insist on its acceptance. "Powderly will not resign because he fears for himself, or his policy," said Bengaugh, "but because he fears the cause he represents will suffer through attacks on him dictated by outside interests."

BLAINE IN FRANKFORT.

NEW YORK, Sept. 10.—A cablegram from Hamburg this morning says, Blaine has found the Hebrew bankers of Frankfort very hospitable. Already he has been their guest at the opera, and was the recipient of a formal ovation at the Seligman mansion. Seligman, escorted Blaine through the various banking institutions of the city, introducing him at first as the "coming President of the United States." Blaine presently objected to this and assured him that he was not a candidate. "But my brother tells me," persisted Seligman, "you are sure to be elected." "I have no idea of allowing my name to be used," said Mr. Blaine; "I am not asking the Presidency nor would I take it as a gift."

RAILWAY SOLD.

BUFFALO, Sept. 10.—The Buffalo division of the Buffalo, New York and Philadelphia Railroad, according to a decree of the court was sold this morning and was bid in by a syndicate for $3,458,471.

BARNS BURNED.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 10.—General Banning's barns at Wilmington were destroyed by fire this morning. Loss, ten thousand dollars. It was the work of an incendiary.

GOV. BARTLETT.

OAKLAND, Sept. 10.—Gov. Bartlett has been unconscious all day, and is resting uncomfortably.

FIRE IN MONTREAL.

MONTREAL, Sept. 10.—Henry Porter's extensive tannery and five adjoining tenement houses were burned to the ground this morning. Twenty-six families are homeless. Total loss is estimated at $200,000.

THE IRON TRADE.

Glasgow's Greatness----What Iron and Coal Has Accomplished.

A Glasgow Shipbuilder's Views on British Columbia's Opportunities.

Mr. Henry M. Napier, of the ship building and engineering firm of Messrs. Napier, Shanks & Bell, Glasgow, who has been in the city for the past week leaves by the Elder to-night for San Francisco on a visit. He will return to Victoria before proceeding east. His visit here has been to learn something of the requirements of the country and its shipping interests. He has seen much about Victoria to amuse him. The absence of copper coin is a matter of surprise to him. So also is the toll demanded for the tonsorial operation of cutting one's hair, for which, in one shop, the unreasonable sum of 2s. 50 cents is charged. Victoria to his mind will never be a desirable place to visit or reside in until a perfect system of drainage is carried to completion. So far as his judgment goes, and the observations made, he does not consider the Chinese a drawback to the city, in fact without them he is at a loss to understand how the city could get along. He is quite certain that operations in the canneries, the mines and other concerns employing a large number of men would find it a difficult job to replace them. In his firm's yard, which covers an area of fifteen acres, there are employed some 1500 men and boys. At times the builders find their men become troublesome; strikes are always an injury to the employed, as well as the employers. Since 1883 building on the Clyde has been very dull. This is in consequence of the enormous yearly increase in the tonnage turned out; being far beyond the actual requirements of the carrying trade of the world. On the Clyde there were no less than 30 ship-building yards, giving employment to between 30,000 and 40,000 men. This did not include the army of men in the iron works, the coal and iron mines and other branches, which was far in excess of the number in the yards. The wages paid ranged from 16s. to 35s. a week, which he considered would go further as a purchasing medium in Scotland than would $3 or $4 a day here. Vessels were now built of steel, instead of iron, as was the fashion a few years ago. The steel plates cost fully 20 per cent. more than iron, but the durability was proportionately greater. The steel plates were manufactured under what is known as the Seimans' process. The ore had to be converted into pig-iron and the pig into ordinary iron, cast and malleable, by puddling; whilst steel was made in large furnaces under a high temperature from a proper mixture of pig and manganess. The Clyde was noted the world over for the extent of her ship-building yards. The district itself was the largest in the world in that particular line. With the growth of that industry Glasgow had expanded until it was now the second city in the Kingdom, having a population of over 750,000 and increasing at a rapid rate. In 1820 the depth of water in the Clyde was only 4 feet for fully 14 miles down the river; now at low tide it was 17 feet, and at high tide 26 to 28 feet. Some of the largest vessels afloat were launched on the Clyde. Here also whole fleets were built. The first iron-clad ever built, the Erebus, for the Crimean war, in 1853-4, was constructed by relatives of Mr. Napier's. Since then wood gradually gave way to iron and iron to steel. The machinery necessary to roll the plates for ship building was of great power as plates had to be rolled for ships and boilers which would weigh from 1 to 3½ and 4 tons. If the steel process had not been discovered it would have been impossible to construct such boilers and engines as were now being put into vessels; they were known as triple expansion engines and were of vast power. In close proximity to the Clyde was to be found inexhaustible fields of coal, iron and limestone, these with clay imported from Spain, and labor at a reasonable price enabled the Clyde to compete with the world in the ship building line.

A CHANCE FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA.

From what he had seen in the ore line as well as heard of the extent of our iron beds he was confident if anthracite coal can only be found, as well as limestone and the necessary clay, which, however, can be imported at a low rate, and our ability to produce a good article at a cheap rate to compete with the cheap labor of Britain and the continent British Columbia must become a great iron producing and manufacturing centre. Everything in other respects was in our favor; climate and transportation the year round to all parts of the globe. It rested entirely with the question of labor, anthracite coal and clay. No other industry gathers around it the industrial and mechanical classes as does iron. Hence its immense importance to such centres as Glasgow, Birmingham and Pittsburg, as well as many continental cities. The oriental market was open to British Columbia and a large trade should be done there.

Shooting Accident.

Mr. W. J. McKay, a compositor in THE TIMES office, in company with Mr. Anson Whittier went out last night to the country, for the purpose of having a day's sport. They were up bright and early with the sun this morning, and hunted round for some time without securing or even seeing any game. Mr. McKay was placing a cartridge in his rifle, which was a breech-loader. It was pointing downwards. By some unaccountable means the rifle discharged, the bullet passing through Mr. McKay's right boot including his toe, which is so severely lacerated that it may be found necessary to amputate it. After his accident Mr. McKay had to walk a mile through the woods, the blood streaming out of the wounded toe. The boot was burned, so near was the rifle when it went off. He was brought to the city and taken to his room and medical aid at once brought to his relief. To-morrow will settle the matter of amputation. Mr. McKay is a steady young gentleman; his fellow-compositors and acquaintances sympathize with him in his sad mishap.

TO PORT ANGELES.

The Excursion on Friday to the City Across the Straits.

At 4:30 yesterday morning, the excursion party to Port Angles left the city. After a pleasant run of three hours, the Roche Harbor lime kilns were visited, and the industry of burning lime and preparing the same for market proved an interesting sight for the party. A good view of the works was obtained by Mr. Edward Fleming (of F. & Inebbold, Government street). The company employ 40 men. The lime stone is obtained from a bluff within a few yards of the point of shipment, and the formation is said to extend for nearly five miles inland. The village proper contains little or nothing of interest beyond the extensive works erected by the company. The scenery about this port, the once famous (from a military point of view) San Juan groupe is exceedingly picturesque. After a pleasant run of four hours, Edix Hook light-house and Port Angeles were in sight. In the sixties this was the port of entry for the whole of Puget Sound, but after the loss of the steamship Brother Jonathan, and the death thereby of Mr. Victor Smith, the collector of customs and the most wealthy citizen of the place, it lost its political influence, which resulted in the removal of the officials and the custom house to Port Townsend. The progress of former years is now fast returning, and with greatly renewed energy, as evinced in the clearing and building that is now going on in the town site. It possesses a remarkable and beautiful harbor. A long wharf, three hotels, two stores, bakery, printing office, saw mill, the united signal station and telegraph office and postoffice comprise the business portion of the town, while in addition there are the extensive offices of the Puget Sound Co-operative Colony, which at present comprises some 3000 members, about 850 of whom have already arrived and settled at Port Angeles. Up to the present time the saw mill has not been able to supply the demand for lumber, consequently 100 or more are living in tents. Mayor Fell was received by the President, Mr. Venable Smith and the officers of the company, who showed His Worship every attention. After a five hours stay on shore, during which time the passengers visited all near points of interest, the staunch steamer Evangel steamed out of the smooth waters of the harbor and encountered a very heavy westerly wind, that made nearly all on board sick, even His Worship was considerably affected. The run from Edis hook light to the outer wharf occupied exactly 1 hour and 45 minutes. There were 51 passengers from Victoria, while 7 passengers came from Port Angeles to Victoria. Thus ended the first direct trip from Pt. Angeles to Victoria by a passenger boat during a period of over 20 years.

Fire! Fire!!
The undersigned beg to notify their customers and the public generally that they can be found on Fort Street, two doors above Blanchard, until the premises lately occupied by them are rebuilt, and are now ready to supply all kinds of confectionery at lowest prices.

THE SUGAR MONOPOLY.

Mr. WM. PATERSON, in his admirable address at the Victoria Theatre last Wednesday, laid bare startling facts relating to the enormity of the sugar monopoly fraud. In clear, pointed language he enlarged on the subject, making it so plain that a child could understand, the injustice which is being inflicted on the Canadian public under the operations of the tariff in sugar. In the east the matter is being discussed through the press and on the platform. The public, taking alarm at the position in which a complete monopoly would have placed them, are beginning to appreciate their true position. After the St. Lawrence sugar refinery was burned an effort was made to form a combination between the Redpaths, the Moncton and Halifax refineries in order to regulate the price at which sugar was to be sold to the trade. A few of the leading wholesale houses were brought within the precinct of this combination. Others for substantial reasons decline being parties to such an unholy alliance—for its object was to filch from the pockets of the people, the struggling as well as the opulent, money wherewith to enrich their own coffers. The second largest grocery house in the Dominion, that of Messrs. LIGHTBOUND, RALSTON & Co., of Montreal, did not enter the compact. An effort was made to prevent their handling any sugar. The firm went quietly to work and cabled to Greenock, Scotland, for quotations. Finding it possible to supply the Canadian market with a foreign article, equally as good as the home production, and at a much less figure than that charged by the Canadian sugar monopolists, an order for a couple of thousand barrels was cabled for. The order was considered to be a mere sample one. On its arrival in Montreal consignments were sent to different parts of the country. The result of which is that a complete revolution of the sugar trade in Canada will take place. In almost every exchange received appears the advertisement of retail dealers offering "Scotch granulated," claimed to be far superior to the home-made article, at the reasonable price of 14 pounds for $1. Extra bright Porto Rico—a pure and sweet article—at 17 pounds for $1. These are figures far below the prices charged for the Canadian-made article.

At the last general election the sugar question was one of the knotty problems which was warmly discussed. Many people seemed to imagine that because that commodity had been cheaper in Canada for a number of years back than it had formerly been, that therefore the protective system had not enhanced its cost to consumers. The fact was lost sight of that sugar had been greatly cheapened the world over. In connection with this subject it may interest our readers to learn how the trade is conducted in Britain. An intelligent, shrewd, observing correspondent, writing on the subject, says: "On a recent visit to the old "country, I observed that beautiful "crystallized Demarara was ticketed "in London at 3c. per lb., and good "light brown at 2½c., or 40 lbs. for a "dollar. In order to convince the "most sceptical, I brought with me "from Glasgow three price lists, taken at random from 11 many retail "grocery stores, all selling about the "same rate. From one of these I "purchased three varieties of sugar, "viz., loaf, crystallized and granulated, each costing 4c. per lb., or 25 "lbs. for a dollar. Compared with "what I have bought since returning, "costing 8½c. per lb., or 12 lbs. for a "dollar, the Glasgow granulated is "superior. I also purchased some "half-dozen varieties of candies, at "the rate of 6c. per lb., or 7 lbs. for "40c. I don't know what the price is "here, except of one variety, white "carvies, for which I have been always charged 40c. per lb. In Glasgow I got exactly 7 lbs. for that "amount. Immediately on putting "foot in Canada, our paternal government—as I had anticipated—"called on me to 'stand and deliver,' "and their customs' officer very "blandly examined my box and invoice, charging at the rate of 35 "per cent. and 1½c. per lb., or exactly "two-thirds the cost of the sugar, "for which, of course, I hold a receipt."

One of the Government organs thinks the protection to sugar refineries is insufficient, and urges that the duty on raw sugar be removed and that on refined sugars be made prohibitive. But this is hardly doing the handsome thing by the refineries. A bonus should be thrown in.

A new colonization company under Mr. F. H. Brydges is looming up. The company is to acquire land in the North-West, and is to locate settlers, advancing them on the security of buildings to be erected for their use $600 apiece. As it is stated that the settlers will be carefully selected, and will consist as much as possible of agriculturists with a certain amount of capital, the chances of success for the undertaking are somewhat better than were those of former enterprises.

RAILWAY DEVELOPMENT.

Across the boundary our cousins are displaying great activity in railway construction. Seattle is extending its system in different directions. A line is to be constructed to Port Townsend, to be known as the Port Townsend and Southern Railway. A connection with the other systems will be made at Portland. The St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba line, which will, this year, add an additional 600 miles to its system is working westward towards the Sound. It is well known to those familiar with Mr. J. J. HILL that his ambition is to have a transcontinental line under his own control. In this desire he will be aided by the merchants of St. Paul, Minneapolis, Chicago and the other northwestern centres, anxious to extend the field from whence to draw trade. Many are to be found who throw doubt on the probability of a line being constructed from the C. P. R. across the Fraser river valley to connect with the lines running north from Seattle. This, however, will be built, and that, too, sooner than is generally supposed. Victoria has a line which will yet pour trade into her lap. At present it is but very limited; but as the Island settles up with an industrious class of settlers, the traffic will increase, and Victoria be largely the gainer thereby. She should not rest with having the rails into Wellington; they must go to and far beyond Comox. This is a fertile section, whose settlers are full of ambition to become second to none in the land. Many thousands of acres of good land are yet in a virgin state in that locality. A railway would bring Comox within a few hours' ride of Victoria. Here the farmer will find a market for his produce. In exchange for which he will bring back with him gold or its equivalent in goods from our stores. The thousands sent abroad weekly to enrich other lands would be kept within ourselves, and each one handling the circulating medium would be benefitted thereby. Trade centres and channels change nowadays as do the sandheads in the mouth of the Fraser. Let our leading men take the initiative in the matter, by organizing a company for the purpose of extending the Esquimalt & Nanaimo Railway to the head of the Island. Comox can first be reached and its trade secured to Victoria. We are persuaded that on proper representations being made that the principle the Dominion Government has affirmed of granting subsidies to railways, many of which are not of so much importance as factors in developing the resources of the country as would be the section we have referred to, will be extended to this province. It will not do for our prominent men to lay on their oars and believe that all's well with Victoria, and her position an impregnable one. Doing so may be a great and fatal mistake. The time has arrived for action, and not a day should be lost in making a beginning. The question then is, who'll take the initiative?

RUSSIAN ADVANCES IN ASIA.

The Russians are extending their Asiatic territories in the direction of Afghanistan, having annexed an area of land on the river Murghab. This act will doubtless raise an anti-Russian excitement in England, provided public attention is not too much absorbed in the Irish question to note what is passing in that part of the world. It is a very absurd assumption that, because Russia is always on the lookout to snap up any unconsidered trifle in the way of territory adjacent to her Asiatic domain, she would venture to attack India. Overcoming a few savage hordes is a very different matter from entering upon a struggle which would extend over two and perhaps three continents. Considering that England has just gobbled the rich and extensive empire of Burmah, she can hardly protest with a very good grace against Russian encroachments, so long as they do not infringe upon her own possessions.

In Brief and to the Point.

Dyspepsia is dreadful. Disordered liver is misery. Indigestion is a foe to good nature.

The human digestive apparatus is one of the most complicated and wonderful things in existence. It is easily put out of order.

Greasy food, tough food, sloppy food, bad cookery, mental worry, late hours, irregular habits, and many other things which ought not to be, have made the American people a nation of dyspeptics.

But Green's August Flower has done a wonderful work in reforming this sad business and making the American people so healthy that they can enjoy their meals and be happy.

Remember! No happiness without health. But Green's August Flower brings health and happiness to the dyspeptic. Ask your druggist for a bottle. Seventy-five cents.

Catarrah, Catarrahal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever is cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp, by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King street West, Toronto, Canada.—Christian Standard.

Fred Knight, of Schenectady, aged 35 years, a moulder of hitherto good reputation, met Miss Ida Wallace, a young woman whose conduct has made her the subject of scandal, in a restaurant, and without warning, shot her in the ear with a revolver. He then gave himself up, and stated that he committed the deed because the woman was the cause of his wife leaving him and dying in the county alms' house.

WOMEN'S CONVENTION

Proceedings of British Columbia W. C. T. U. Convention.

Address of Welcome and Reply —Interesting Discussions.

TUESDAY, Sept. 5th.—Devotional exercises led by Mrs. Spofford; Scripture Reading, 51st Chap. of Isaiah, accompanied by appropriate and earnest remarks, the Lord being present to bless.

The President took the chair and declared the Convention open. The minutes of previous sessions read by the Recording Secretary.

A reference in the minutes to a letter read from the Hon. John Robson, informing the Convention that the study of Physiology has been introduced into the public schools for the province; gave rise to a pleasant discussion on the desirability of introducing Scientific Temperance Instruction into the public and high schools.

The Committee on Blank Forms now reported; having revised the form somewhat resulting in large improvement. Report adopted. It was moved, seconded and carried, that copies of the papers giving reports be sent to Ontario Alliance Secretary and Ontario's President of the W. C. T. U.

An explanation of the duties of the Superintendent of Literature was next given by Mrs. Jenkins.

Press Superintendent, Mrs. Sargison, reported. A short discussion took place on the press, and the desirability of securing it on the side of the W. C. T. U.

A report of the Superintendent of the work among sailors and lumbermen from Mrs. Thain, of Moodyville was read by the Recording Secretary. A suggestion was made that railway men and miners be taken into consideration relative to the diffusion of suitable literature in connection with sailors and lumbermen.

A report on Unfermented Sacramental Wine, by Mrs. Wells, next appeared and was adopted.

"Heredity and Hygiene," by Mrs. Dr. Clark, of Victoria, was called for. No response as the lady was not present.

Evangelistic Work—Report by Mrs. D. Robson called for. A letter was read by the Secretary from Vancouver Union to Superintendent of Evangalistic work; also one from Nanaimo, stating their efforts in this line, success and non-success. Also a report from Victoria indicative of progress in this important branch of the work. A verbal report from New Westminster, by Mrs. Peers, gave evidence of a lively interest taken by many of the ministers of the Gospel. Mrs. Spofford spoke very favorably of the help given by her pastor in this work. Also Mrs. French bore similar testimony. A letter from Chilliwhack on this subject was also read. It was moved and carried that the Recording Secretary frame a report from the matter placed in her hands on Evangelistic work.

The President called for report on prison work. Responded to by Mrs. McCutcheon. Some very instructive remarks followed by the President on the success of prison reformation in New Westminster through the efforts of the W. C. T. U. and Christian workers. Many of the prisoners take the pledge, and after regaining their liberty are sorely tempted by their old companions to return to their old habits. They are taught in prison to commit Scripture and select the hymns for singing. Very happy experience given by Mrs. French and Mrs. Spofford on this prison work next followed.

At this point Mrs. Sargison moved that the Convention arise and sing, "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow." Carried.

A report, very full and interesting on Social Purity, was read by the Recording Secretary, giving encouraging information relative to labor in this department. A suggestion in this report relative to the desirability of the W. C. T. U. providing for a bed or beds for women in the new Jubilee Hospital. A very touching incident given by Mrs. Spofford to the point would almost make it appear imperative that this suggestion be acted upon. Adjourned for luncheon.

Afternoon session opened with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. G. Chadsey. The meeting was then called to order by the president. The roll-call of officers and delegates was given by the secretary, also minutes of last meeting read and adopted.

A report of the work among the Indians was read by Mrs. Tate. Adopted.

The mainland organizer, Miss Bowes, reported two new missions one in Hope and one in Cheam.

The island organizer's report shows no new missions, the field being already thoroughly canvassed by Mrs. Youmans and Miss Bowes. A report of the two organizations Loyal Legions however was given. Reports of all the local unions read and approved. Great energy maintained among the officers throughout notwithstanding the smallness of results in many cases.

The president's address followed and was so much appreciated that a motion to the effect that it be printed in sheet form and distributed among the Dominion Unions was made seconded and unanimously carried. Miss McDougall, the worthy corresponding-secretary, who could not arrive before Tuesday afternoon [was received by the convention arising and giving the Chatauqua salute. Adjourned.

In the evening Miss Bowes delivered a lecture on "The Judgment of Christiandom," which was listened to with marked attention, followed by a creditable tangible appreciation.

The audience arose and sang the doxology.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME.

Sister Delegates from the Provinces of British Columbia, and our much esteemed Provincial President, Mrs. Cunningham,

We have looked forward with great pleasure to your coming amongst us, in the beginning of the fourth year of our provincial work. You are welcome to the rural homes of Chilliwhack. As soldiers under the same captain, we say welcome. As co-workers with us for the uplifting of suffering humanity we bid you welcome. Indeed we can do no better than re-echo the words that some of our members heard a year ago—Thrice welcome to our hearts and homes.

We cannot but rejoice in the privileges we have in meeting those who wear the white ribbon, the emblem of purity and friendship, and which is to us more than a name, as we know we may give its wearers loving greeting which will always meet with an appreciative response.

Our assembling together to review a year past, and plan for one to come, will, we are sure, prove the truth of the words, "In unity is strength, in a multitude of councillors there is wisdom." It is wisdom and strength we feel we so much need to wage war against the liquor traffic.

Although as a union, we are so weak and imperfect in many ways, we are thankful that we can claim kinship with you as part of that noble sisterhood, the Dominion W. C. T. U., with whom we wish to labor unceasingly "For God and Home and Native Land." We are happy to have with us Ontario's organizer, Miss Bowes. We know from past experience that we shall appreciate her kind words of counsel and encouragement.

While anticipating a much higher attainment toward the standard of perfection in the future we desire to thank our Heavenly Father for his guidance and guidance in the past, and for the inspiration we have in believing "Our call is God's call," that a woman's sphere is as boundless as a mother's love and as deep as her duty. We earnestly pray that as a convention, we may feel resting upon us the power from on High, which will go with us so long as we are permitted to labor on to help remove the great blot of intemperance from British Columbia, and hoping that after we have done all that we can to obey the command "Sow in beside all waters," we may stand with His precious ransom in our arms. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give you a crown of life.

MRS. JOHN HENDERSON.

TO WOMAN'S CHRISTIAN TEMPERANCE UNION OF CHILLIWHACK:

DEAR SISTERS.—On behalf of the officers and delegates of this convention it affords me great pleasure to tender to you some expression of our thanks for your kind invitation to meet with you in convention, and for the hearty welcome with which you have received us to your hearts and homes. As we come to this, the fourth annual gathering, with the purpose of reviewing another year's work, and also to receive fresh courage and impetus for that to come, we feel sure that surrounded by so much of the handiwork of our Heavenly Father, we cannot but derive fresh inspiration for the work unto which we believe God has called us. Your fields of golden waving grain by which we are surrounded, and into which you are even now thrusting your sickles, remind us that the harvest fields of the world are now all white to harvest, and we are bidden to thrust in our sickles and garner in souls for the kingdom of God. The trees which seem to whisper His praises, teach us that He will make us also as trees planted by rivers of water, whose leaves shall not wither, and whose fruit shall not fail. The perfume of its flowers as it is wafted to us speaks of the fragrance and beauty of the spirit of the lowly God man, our precious Saviour and dearest friend, who is to us the "rose of Sharon and lily of the valley." While the carpet of green on which we tread reminds us continually that our days are as the grass; the wind passeth over it, and it is gone. So we also shall quickly pass away, and our time and opportunities for lifting up fallen humanity and winning precious souls for Christ, will soon be gone, to be called no more.

And shall we not, dear sisters, surrounded by so much which reminds us of the purpose for which God created us, and His will concerning us, enter into our work for this year with redoubled energy, and purpose of heart, never to give up the struggle till victory shall be ours. It is with great pleasure we accept the invitation extended to us by you. As for the first time since our organization we meet in a community in which no unholy license permits man to deal out to his fellow man, that by which lives are wrecked, hearts broken and souls sent down to perdition. Here, for the first time as a convention, we meet in a spot of God's earth which is unstained by this legalized curse, and from our hearts we say, all honor to the White Ribbon Army and the people of this municipality, who have so persistently said, we will not have this evil in our midst. May God bless you in your work, that you may be successful in keeping it out and in your home, that its evil influence may never cast a shadow across your fireside. We feel assured, dear sisters, that we shall be much benefitted by meeting with you, and we trust that by our coming you may be helped in your work, that we may assist each other in prayer, and by counselling together, for without council purposes fail, but in the multitude of councillors they are established. And in all our deliberations may the Holy Spirit lead and guide us to success and victory.

CHAPTER VII.

A SLAUGHTER GRIM AND GREAT.

Then came a pause, and we stood there in the chilly, silent darkness waiting till the moment came to start. It was, perhaps, the most trying time of all—that slow, slow quarter of an hour. The minutes seemed to drag along with leaden feet, and the quiet, the solemn hush, that brooded over all—big, as it were, with a coming fate—was most oppressive to the spirits.

The moon went down; for a long while she had been getting nearer and nearer to the horizon, now she finally sank, and left the world in darkness save for a faint gray tinge in the eastern sky that palely heralded the coming dawn.

Mr. Mackenzie stood, watch in hand, his wife clinging to his arm and striving to stifle her sobs.

"Twenty minutes to four," he said; "it ought to be light enough to attack at twenty minutes past four. Capt. Good had better be moving; he will want three or four minutes' start."

Good gave one final polish to his eyeglass, nodded to us in a jocular sort of way—which I could not help feeling it must have cost him something to muster up—and, ever polite, took off his steel lined cap to Mrs. Mackenzie and started for his position at the head of the kraal, to reach which he had to make a detour by some paths known to the natives.

Just then one of the boys came in and reported that everybody in the Masai camp, with the exception of the two sentries who were walking up and down in front of the respective entrances, appeared to be fast asleep. Then the rest of us took the road. First came the guide, then Sir Henry, Umslopogaas, the Wakwafi Askari and Mr. Mackenzie's two mission natives, armed with long spears and shields. I followed immediately after with Alphonse and five natives, all armed with guns, and Mr. Mackenzie brought up the rear with the six remaining natives.

The cattle kraal where the Masai were camped lay at the foot of the hill on which the house stood, or, roughly speaking, about 800 yards from the mission buildings. The first 500 yards of this distance we traversed quietly indeed, but at a good pace after that we crept forward as silently as a leopard on his prey, gliding like ghosts from bush to bush and stone to stone. When I had gone a little way I chanced to look behind me, and saw the redoubtable Alphonse staggering along with white face and trembling knees, and his rifle, which was at full cock, pointed directly at the small of my back. Having halted, and carefully put the rifle at "safety," we started again, and all went well till we were within 100 yards or so of the kraal, when his teeth began to chatter in the most aggressive way.

"If you don't stop that, I will kill you," I whispered, savagely; for the idea of having all our lives sacrificed to a tooth chattering cook was too much for me. I began to fear that he would betray us, and heartily wished we had left him behind.

"But, monsieur, I cannot help it," he answered; "it is the cold."

Here was a dilemma; but fortunately I devised a plan. In the pocket of the coat I had on was a small piece of dirty rag that I had used some time before to clean a gun with. "Put this in your mouth," I whispered again, giving him the rag; "and if I hear another sound you are a dead man." I knew that that would stifle the clatter of his teeth. I must have looked as if I meant what I said, for he instantly obeyed me and continued his journey in silence.

Then we crept on again.

At last we were within fifty yards of the kraal. Between us and it was an open space of sloping grass, with only one mimosa bush and a couple of tussocks of a sort of thistle for cover. We were still hidden in fairly thick bush. It was beginning to grow light. The stars had paled and a sickly gleam of yellow appeared in the east and was reflected on the earth. We could see the outline of the kraal clearly enough, and could also make out the faint glimmer of the dying embers of the Masai camp fires. We halted and watched for the sentry we knew was posted at the opening. Presently he appeared, a fine tall fellow, walking idly up and down within five paces of the thorn stopped entrance. We had hoped to catch him napping, but it was not to be. He seemed particularly wide awake. If we could not kill that man, and kill him silently, we were lost. There we crouched and watched him. Presently Umslopogaas, who was a few paces ahead of me, turned and made a sign, and next second I saw him go down on his stomach like a snake and, taking an opportunity when the sentry's head was turned, begin to work his way through the grass without a sound.

The unconscious sentry commenced to hum a little tune, and Umslopogaas crept on. He reached the shelter of the mimosa bush unperceived, and there waited. Still the sentry walked up and down. Presently he turned and looked over the wall into the camp. Instantly the human snake who was stalking him glided on ten yards and got behind one of the tussocks of the thistle like plant, reaching it as the Elmoran turned again. As he turned his eye fell upon this patch of thistles, and it seemed to strike him that it did not look quite right. He advanced a pace towards it—halted, yawned, stooped down, picked up a little pebble and threw it at it. It hit Umslopogaas upon the head, luckily not upon the armor shirt. Had it done so the clink would have betrayed us. Luckily, too, the shirt was browned and not bright steel, which would certainly have been detected. Apparently satisfied that there was nothing wrong, he then gave over his investigations and contented himself with leaning on his spear and standing gazing idly at the tuft. For at least three minutes did he stand thus, plunged apparently in a gentle reverie, and there we lay in the last extremity of anxiety, expecting every moment that we should be discovered or that some untoward accident would happen. I could hear Alphonse's teeth going like anything on the oiled rag, and turning my head round made an awful face at him. But I am bound to state that my own heart was at much the same ganio as the Frenchman's castanets, while the perspiration was pouring from my body, causing the wash leather lined shirt to stick to me unpleasantly, and altogether I was in the pitiable state known by schoolboys as a "blue funk."

At last the ordeal came to an end. The sentry glanced at the east and appeared to note with satisfaction that his period of duty was coming to an end—as indeed it was, once and for all—for he rubbed his hands and began to walk again briskly, to warm himself.

The moment his back was turned the long black snake glided on again and reached the other thistle tuft, which was within a couple of paces of his return beat.

Back came the sentry, and strolled right past the tuft, utterly unconscious of the presence that was crouching behind it. Had he looked down he could scarcely have failed to see, but he did not do so.

He passed, and then his hidden enemy erected himself and with outstretched hand followed in his tracks.

A moment more, and, just as the Elmoran was about to turn, the great Zulu made a spring, and in the growing light we could see his long, lean hands close round the Masai's throat. Then followed a convulsive twining of the two dark bodies, and in another second I saw the Masai's head beat back and heard a sharp crack, something like that of a dry twig snapping, and he fell down upon the ground, his limbs moving spasmodically.

Umslopogaas had put out all his iron strength and broken the warrior's neck.

For a moment he knelt upon his victim, still gripping his throat till he was sure that there was nothing more to fear from him, and then he rose and beckoned to us to advance, which we did on all fours, like a colony of huge apes. On reaching the kraal we saw that the Masai had still further choked this entrance, which was about ten feet wide—no doubt in order to guard against attack—by dragging four or five tops of mimosa trees up to it. So much the better for us, I reflected; the more obstruction there was the slower would they be able to come through. Here we separated, Mackenzie and his party creeping up under the shadow of the wall to the left, while Sir Henry and Umslopogaas took their stations one on each side of the thorn fence, the two spearmen and the Askari lying down in front of it. I and my men crept on up the right side of the kraal, which was about fifty paces long.

When I was two-thirds up I halted, and placed my men at distances of four paces from one another, keeping Alphonse close to me, however. Then I peeped for the first time over the wall. It was getting fairly light now, and the first thing I saw was the white donkey, exactly opposite to me, and close by it I could make out the pale face of little Flossie, who was sitting as the lad had described, some ten paces from the wall. Round her lay many warriors, sleeping. At distances all over the surface of the kraal were the remains of fires, round each of which slept some five-and-twenty Masai, for the most part gorged with food. Now and then a man would raise himself, yawn, and look at the east, which had now turned primrose; but none got up. I determined to wait another five minutes, both to allow the light to increase, so that we could make better shooting, and to give Good and his party, of whom I could see or hear nothing, every opportunity to make ready.

Suddenly, just as I was nerving myself for the signal, having already selected my man on whom I meant to open fire—a great fellow sprawling on the ground within three feet of little Flossie—Alphonse's teeth began to chatter again like the hoofs of a galloping giraffe, making a great noise in the silence. The rag had dropped out in the agitation of his mind. Instantly a Masai within three paces of us woke, and, sitting up, gazed about him, looking for the cause of the sound. Moved beyond myself, I brought the butt end of my rifle down on the pit of the Frenchman's stomach. This stopped his chattering; but, as he doubled up, he managed to let off his gun in such a manner that the bullet passed within an inch of my head.

There was no need for a signal now. From both sides of the kraal broke out a waving line of fire, in which I myself joined, managing with a snap shot to knock over my Masai by Flossie just as he was jumping up. Then from the top end of the kraal there rang an awful yell, in which I rejoiced to recognize Good's piercing soto rising clear and shrill above the din, and in another second followed such a scene as I have never seen before nor shall again. With an universal howl of terror and fury the brawny crowd of savages within the kraal sprang to their feet, many of them to fall again beneath our well directed hail of lead before they had moved a yard. For a moment they stood undecided, and then hearing the cries and curses that rose unceasingly from the top end of the kraal, and bewildered by the storm of bullets, they, as by one impulse, rushed down toward the thorn stopped entrance. As they went we kept pouring into the mob as fast as we could load. I had emptied my repeater of the ten shots it contained, and was just beginning to slip in some more when I bethought me of little Flossie. Looking up I saw that the white donkey was lying kicking, having been knocked over either by one of our bullets or a Masai spear thrust. There were no living Masai near, but the black nurse was on her feet and with a spear cutting the rope that bound Flossie's feet. Next second she ran to the wall of the kraal and began to climb over it, an example which the little girl followed. But Flossie was evidently very stiff and cramped, and could only go slowly, and as she went two Masai flying down the kraal caught sight of her and rushed toward her to kill her. The first fellow came up just as the poor little girl, after a desperate effort to climb the wall, fell back into the kraal. Up flashed the great spear, and as it did so a bullet from my rifle found its home in the holder's ribs, and over he went like a shot rabbit. But behind him was the other man, and, alas, I had only that one cartridge in the magazine! Flossie had scrambled to her feet and was facing the second man, who was advancing with raised spear. I turned my head aside and felt sick as death. I could not bear to see him stab her. Glancing up again, to my surprise I saw the Masai's spear lying on the ground, while the man himself was staggering about with both hands to his head. Suddenly I saw a puff of smoke, proceeding apparently from Flossie, and the man fell down headlong. Then I remembered the Derringer pistol she carried, and saw that she had fired both barrels of it at him, thereby saving her life. In another instant she had made an effort, and assisted by the nurse, who was lying on the top, had scrambled over the wall, and I knew that she was, comparatively speaking, safe.

All this takes some time to tell, but I do not suppose that it took more than fifteen seconds to enact. I soon got the magazine of the repeater filled again with cartridges, and once more opened fire, not on the seething black mass which was gathering at the end of the kraal, but on fugitives who bethought them to climb the wall. I picked off several of these men, moving down towards the end of the kraal as I did so, and arriving at the corner, or rather the bend of the oval, in time to see, and by means of my rifle to assist in the mighty struggle that took place there.

By this time some 200 Masai—allowing that we had up to the present accounted for fifty—had gathered together in front of the thorn stopped entrance, driven thither by the spears of Good's men, whom they doubtless supposed were a large force instead of being but ten strong. For some reason it never occurred to them to try and rush the wall, which they could have scrambled over with comparative ease; they all made for the fence, which was really a strongly interwoven fortification. With a bound the first warrior went at it, and even before he touched the ground on the other side I saw Sir Henry's great axe swing up and fall with awful force upon his resting head, and he sank into the middle of the thorns. Then, with a yell and a crash, they began to break through as they might, and ever as they came the great axe swung and Inkosi-kaas flashed, and they fell dead one by one, each man thus helping to build up a barrier against his fellows. Those who escaped the axes of the pair fell at the hands of the Askari and the two mission Kaffirs, and those who passed scathless from them were brought low by my own and Mackenzie's fire.

Faster and more furious grew the fighting. Single Masai would spring upon the dead bodies of their comrades, and engage one or other of the assault with their long spears, but, thanks chiefly to the mail shirts, the result was always the same.

Good and his men were quite close by now, and our people had to cease firing into the mass for fear of killing some of them (as it was, one of them was slain in this way). Mad and desperate with fear, the Masai by a frantic effort burst through the thorn fence and piled up dead, and sweeping Curtis, Umslopogaas, and the other three before them, broke into the open. And now it was that we began to lose men fast. Down went our poor Askari who was armed with the axe, a great spear standing out a foot behind his back; and before long the two spearmen who had stood with him went down too, dying fighting like tigers, and others of our party shared their fate. For a moment I feared the fight was lost—certainly it trembled in the balance. I shouted to my men to cast down their rifles, and to take spears and throw themselves into the melee. They obeyed, their blood being now thoroughly up, and Mr. MacKenzie's people followed their example.

This move had a momentary good result, but still the fight hung in the balance.

Our people fought magnificently, hurling themselves upon the dark mass of Elmoran, hewing, thrusting, slaying and being slain. And over above the din rose Good's awful yell of encouragement as he plunged to wherever the fight was thickest; and ever, with an almost machine like regularity, the two axes rose and fell, carrying death and disablement at every stroke. But I could see that the strain was beginning to tell on Sir Henry, who was bleeding from several flesh wounds; his breath was coming in gasps, and the veins stood out on his forehead like blue and knotted cords. Even Umslopogaas, man of iron that he was, was hard pressed. I myself did not go into the melee, but hovered outside like the swift "back" in a football scrimmage, putting a bullet through a Masai whenever I got a chance. I was more use so. I fired forty-nine cartridges that morning, and I did not miss many shots.

Presently, do as we would, the beam of the balance began to rise against us. We had not more than fifteen or sixteen effectives left now, and the Masai had at least fifty. Of course, if they had kept their heads, and shaken themselves together, they could soon have made an end of the matter; but that is just what they did not do, not having yet recovered from their start, and some of them having actually fled from their sleeping places without their weapons. Still, by now many individuals were fighting with their normal courage and discretion, and this alone was sufficient to defeat us. To make matters worse just then, when Mackenzie's rifle was empty a brawny savage, armed with a "sime," or sword, made a rush for him. The clergyman flung down his gun, and drawing his huge carver from his elastic belt (his revolver had dropped out in the fight), they closed in desperate struggle. Presently, locked in a close embrace, missionary and Masai rolled on to the ground behind the wall, and for some time I, being amply occupied with my own affairs, and in keeping my skin from being pricked, remained in ignorance of his fate or how the duel had ended.

To and fro surged the fight, slowly turning round like the vortex of a human whirlpool, and the matter began to look very bad for us. Just then, however, a fortunate thing happened. Umslopogaas, either by accident or design, broke out of the ring and engaged a warrior at some few paces from it. As he did so, another man ran up and struck him with all his force between the shoulders with his great spear, which, falling on the tough steel shirt, failed to pierce it and rebounded. For a moment the man stared aghast at protective armor being unknown among these tribes—and then he yelled out at the top of his voice:

"They are devils!—bewitched, bewitched!" and seized by a sudden panic, he threw down his spear and began to fly. I cut short his career with a bullet, and Umslopogaas brained his man, and then the panic spread to the others.

"Bewitched, bewitched!" they cried, and tried to escape in every direction, utterly demoralized and broken spirited—for the most part even throwing down their shields and spears.

On the last scene of that dreadful fight I need not dwell. It was a slaughter great and grim, in which no quarter was asked or given. One incident, however, is worth detailing. Just as I was hoping that it was all done and that the survivors were about to fly, a huge Masai warrior sprang up and, clearing the piles of dying and dead like an antelope, sped like the wind up the kraal toward the spot where I was standing at the moment. But he was not alone, for Umslopogaas came gliding on his tracks with the peculiar swallow like motion for which he was noted, and as they neared me I recognized in the Masai the herald of the previous night. Finding that run as he would, his pursuer was gaining on him, the man halted and turned round to give battle. Umslopogaas also pulled up.

"Ah, ah," he cried, in mockery, to the Elmoran, "it is thou whom I talked with last night—the Lygonani, the herald, the capturer of little girls—he who would kill a little girl. And thou didst hope to stand man to man and face to face with Umslopogaas, an Induna of the tribe of the Tlaquitsini, of the people of the Amazulu! Behold, thy prayer is granted! And I did swear to hew thee limb from limb, thou insolent dog! Behold, I will do it even now!"

The Masai ground his teeth with fury and charged at the Zulu with his spear. As he came, Umslopogaas deftly stepped aside, and swinging Inkosi-kaas high above his head with both hands, brought the broad blade down with such fearful force from behind upon the Masai's shoulder, just where the neck is set into the frame, that its razor edge shore right through bone and flesh and muscle, almost severing the head and one arm from the body.

"Ou!" ejaculated Umslopogaas, contemplating the corpse of his foe; "I have kept my word. It was a good stroke."

From the North.

The Barbara Boscowitz arrived from Fort Simpson and way ports this morning with the following passengers: Mrs. Snow, Miss Gilbert, Mr. Lowe, Mrs. Lowe, A. J. McLellan, A. McNeill, J. Holmes, Mike Hart and Wm. May. The Boscowitz brought 7000 cases and 200 barrels of salmon.

Rev. Mr. Crosby's steamer, the Glad Tidings, is engaged in towing Mr. Duncan's Indians, with their household effects, from Old to New Metlakahtla. Already about 130 canoes and boats have left for New Metlakahtla and the old place presents a desolate scene. The Indians removed the roofs and sides of their former homes and carried them away. The work of removing is going on peacefully. The Glad Tidings had seventy canoes in tow during her last trip.

Amongst the passengers on the Boscowitz were four white men and fifteen Indians belonging to the seized sealers Dolphin, Grace and Sayward. These men were taken aboard at Fort Simpson. A number of Indians are waiting at Sitka for passages to Victoria; the poor natives were turned ashore from the sealing schooners by the American authorities without means, and cannot make the long and perilous journey in canoes.

There is no mining news and everything is quiet at the different settlements.

BISHOP SEGHERS' MURDER.

Further Facts Connected with the Country and the Crime.

A San Francisco Monitor representative has had an interview with a distinguished official and citizen of Alaska, Hon. Charles Tingle, from whom additional particulars of the inhuman murder were received, together with other information concerning Alaska. Mr. Tingle said:

"It is hardly necessary to state that Alaska is a wild country, because—to use a common expression—that goes without saying. The settlements and stations are very isolated from one another, and one hundred miles is considered quite an insignificent distance between neighbors.

"The place where the Archbishop was murdered was a deserted village some distance from Nulato, which is two hundred miles up the Yukon river—a very large stream which in some localities is as much as twenty miles wide. This part of the country is particularly wild and bleak looking. A great system of snow-covered mountains, well-timbered, extends on all sides, and lends a weird impressiveness to the landscape.

"The treaty made between the United States and Russia respecting Alaska, expressly stipulated that missionaries of the Greek Church should have Alaska for an exclusive field. But this article of the treaty has been rendered inoperative by custom, and for many years past missionaries of all religions have established, from time to time, stations at various coast and interior points. The Presbyterian minister, Sheldon Jackson, established a mission some years ago, which was a spiritual and material fiasco. The Moravians also established stations on the Mushejack and Kuskoquin rivers, which are north of the Aleutian Islands. The Catholic missionaries endeavored to organize stations many years ago, but failed for the same reason that the others have—that the natives are so thoroughly inoculated with the doctrines and beliefs of the Greek Church it is almost impossible to do away with the influences which the Greek priests have over them. This might psychologically be called a control of mind over matter.

"The natives are possessed of a very limited intelligence, and are impressionless, torpid and dull. As your readers probably know, it was in endeavoring to re-establish on a firmer foothold the Catholic missions that Archbishop Seghers was assassinated. His murderer, Frank Fuller, is a very ignorant fellow, but was employed by the Archbishop as a man-servant and was his Grace's constant companion. He repeatedly expressed a desire to become a Jesuit Brother, and importuned the Archbishop constantly to use his influence to have his request granted. But his Grace uniformly, but with characteristic gentleness of manner, refused to entertain the request, because Fuller was not possessed of an education in the first place, and was otherwise unfitted for the arduous and self-abnegating duties of the position he aspired to.

"As your readers have already learned from Father Tosi's account of the tragedy, Archbishop Seghers pushed on from Nulato to a deserted village thirteen miles further North. Fuller lodged in same house and room with the Archbishop. From the date of arrival at the village, events shaped themselves with startling rapidity and culminated in the horrible climax of a most cold-blooded and sacrilegious murder. At the dawn of morning whilst the Archbishop, tired with his wearying travel of the day, was quietly sleeping, Fuller stealthily arose, dressed himself and reached for his gun. He deliberately pointed it at the prostrate Prelate, and, after calling to him, coolly said: "Bishop, you or I have got to die, and you're prepared but I'm not, so I'll kill you!" With these words he discharged the rifle, and an instant later the Archbishop fell back a bleeding corpse.

Mr. Tingle then verified the statements made by Father Tosi as to the subsequent movements of Fuller, the disposition of the Archbishop's remains and the arrest and confinement of Fuller on board the revenue cutter Bear, as already detailed in these columns. In concluding the interview Mr. Tingle said with considerable earnestness: "Let me say one thing more, in conclusion, about the mental condition of Fuller. I asked many people who had a knowledge of the facts of the case whether they thought him insane or not; but they said he showed no symptoms of mental unsoundness. The universal opinion amongst intelligent people of all religious persuasions is that Fuller's deed was a deliberate, cold-blooded murder, prompted by an inordinate and abnormally developed blood thirstiness and by a most inhuman and indiscriminate cruelty."

THE SEALING FLEET.

Arrival of the Lottie Fairfield and the Adela To-day.

This (Saturday) morning the sealing schooner Lottie Fairfield, Capt. White, arrived in the Royal Roads from the Behring Sea, having on board 2,600 skins. Her total catch was 3,000, the 400 landed early in the season were seized by the Rush. Capt. White feels himself again, having fully survived the attempt made to take his life by one of the crew with poison. Mrs. White arrived from San Francisco some days ago and was anxiously awaiting the Captain's arrival. One of the Lottie's hunters, a Mr. Johnston, is reported to have made the biggest record of the season, he having captured no less than 63 on one occasion and 57 on another. They found the seal in great numbers, the weather was favorable for a considerable time, at others it was boisterous and heavy. Capt. White kept out well to sea and eluded the American cutter. The Lottie was towed into the harbor in the afternoon and tied up near the Mary Ellen.

The Adela, Capt. Hansen, carrying the German flag, arrived in the harbor at 10:30 this morning, having 1,350 skins on board. This is one of the smallest of the whole fleet. She had an Indian crew and Indian hunters. Her catch is regarded as a good one. The captain has nothing new to state, beyond that he picked up the boat which got lost from the American schooner, the Vanderbilt, last July, and brought the boats and its occupants to this city. From here they go to San Francisco.

The Victoria vessels yet to arrive are the Teresa, owned by Mr. Troup; the Ada, owned by Capt. Gray, for whom Mr. Morris Moss is agent; the Favorite and the Kate, owned by Mr. Charles Spring, and the Mountain Chief, owned by Mr. George Byrnes. They are hourly expected.

The catch of the Indian schooner Lottie from Neah Bay, W. T., was brought over on Thursday by the Geo. E. Starr and purchased by a local dealer. The catch embraced 700 skins.

KOOTENAY NEWS.

Latest Mining Intelligence---The Crops, Police and Indians.

Mr. John P. Galbraith returned from Kootenay on Friday night, and having spent a month in that portion of the province, brings the latest news. To a representative of THE TIMES Mr. Galbraith stated that the

was being prosecuted with extraordinary vigor throughout the whole district, and that the mineral richness of Kootenay was gradually being unfolded by the prospector. Hydraulic mining is being carried on successfully on Wild Horse Creek by David Griffith & Co., who have a little giant at work. The ground has been thoroughly prospected by the company and so convinced are they of its auriferous wealth, that arrangements are being made for an additional giant, which will be added next spring. A very large sum of money has been expended in ditching, building dams, etc., and the golden harvest will now be reaped. On Bull river twenty men have made the necessary preparations for work when the water falls. Col. Baker's claim on Perry Creek is being worked successfully. The slum has been penetrated, and excellent returns are anticipated. Eight men are employed at this mine, and its success will ensure the opening of

on the same creek. On Finlay Creek, Brady & Cochrane, have got their water ditch completed and the hydraulic giant set up and working. Owing to the lateness of the season, there will not be much accomplished this summer, but a splendid yield is anticipated next year. About twenty-five Chinamen and a few white men are mining on the Moyea river, and making from $1.50 to $5 a day. In quartz several new developments have been made, and galena and free milling ore of fabulous richness is known to exist in enormous quantities. The only obstacle to development is the absence of capital, and the difficulty and expense attending transportation. A mine owned by Archie McMurdock & Co., on Spillamecheen creek, was bonded lately to an English company for £150,000. McKay Bros., McDonald and others, own valuable mines in the same vicinity. Rich ledges have also been uncovered on Gladstone mountain, near the Columbia river. A mining expert named Devereaux, from Colorado, is inspecting the lower Kootenay mines and the new discovery at the outlet of Kootenay river. Col. Baker has gone to Montreal with specimens of coal from Crow's Nest Pass, with the object of enlisting capital. Altogether the prospects of Kootenay, which Mr. Galbraith looks upon as the richest section of the province, are brighter to-day than they ever were before. Its gold and silver will alone make it famous.

THE CROPS

were good and the yield abundant, with the exception of potatoes, which in some places suffered a blight from frost. Col. Baker's crop was a heavy one, but unfortunately a shower of hail cut down four or five acres.

THE INDIAN MURDERERS.

Kaplı and Isidore, jr., after a good deal of reluctance on the part of Chief Isidore, were delivered up to the authorities. These Indians, it will be remembered, are charged with the murder of Hilton and Kemp, two Cariboo miners. As the local constable might have difficulty in detaining the prisoners, Major Steele had them removed to the mounted police quarters at Galbraith's Ferry, where they are now under close confinement. They have been remanded awaiting evidence. Although they are believed to be the murderers, the Indians are reticent. Since the advent of the police the Indians are very quiet, and the white people feel more secure.

THE MOUNTED POLICE

are building their quarters on a peninsula on the Kootenay River, at the mouth of Old Horse Creek, near the ferry. The place has been named Fort Steele by the residents, in honor of Major Steele, the hero of Loon Lake. The buildings will be completed in two or three weeks, and the winter supplies for the force are arriving. The police are officered as follows: Superintendent, Major S. B. Steele; Inspectors, Woods and Huot; Troop Surgeon, Dr. Powell; Sergt., Major Richards; Staff Surgeons, Mercer and Fane; Sergeants, Robie, Montjean, Sinclair and Jones; Corporals, Haine, Ayre, McDonald, Watt, Hanson and Knight; Bugler, Callendar. The file consists of sixty men.

A GREAT MANY TOURISTS

have visited Kootenay this season, among the number a party from Seattle, who canoed the Columbia to Revelstoke and also the Kootenay. They were hospitably entertained, and as a matter of course were delighted with the scenery and people. Count Ernest Hoyos, of Vienna, Austria, with a friend, Ferdinand Frathausdorff, have been hunting in the mountains and have secured many splendid specimens of mountain goat, bear and other game. Gen. Cherry, a retired English officer, was also visiting Kootenay and was in ecstasies with the country.

Mr. Baillie-Grohman is having a steam sawmill and supplies transported to Canal Flat, preparatory to beginning operations on the canal that is to make the Kootenay run up hill and reclaim a large quantity of land.

Capt. John Irving leaves to-night for San Francisco, and will return in a few weeks with the new steamer the Premier.

Mrs. John Grant and Miss Lizzie Wakkins left this morning by the Yosemite for Harrison Hot Springs, where they will sojourn for a week or two.

Supt. Pope, of the Educational Department, Mr. J. T. Galbraith, Ald. Alexander, Mr. H. D. Helmcken, Miss Helmcken and Miss Good returned from the mainland last night.

By the Elder to-day Mrs. Reginald Nuttall, Miss and Master Nuttall, leave for San Francisco to join Mr. Nuttall, who is in business in Southern California, and where the family will reside for some time.

Dr. Archibald Neilson of Glasgow was amongst the arrivals from the east on Thursday night. He is on his way to San Francisco, for which city he will take the steamer to-day. Thence he proceeds east over the American lines. The doctor for many years was a member of the city council of Scotland's commercial metropolis. At present he is making a tour of the American Continent. Already he has visited Eastern Canada and the United States, as well as Manitoba and the Territories, with all of which he was greatly surprised. Victoria is almost as well known in Glasgow—by representation—as is Ottawa. He has seen much in the country, and city to please him, and carries away a very favorable impression of Victoria's great natural advantages.

DROWNING CASE.

Capt. Edward Clark Drowned in the Harbor this Afternoon.

Shortly after 1 o'clock to-day the body of Edward Clark, mate of the Black Diamond, was fished out of the harbor at the foot of Johnson street, where that vessel is lying. It appears that the deceased had been indulging somewhat freely during the forenoon. Shortly before 12 o'clock he, in company with Mr. Frank, of Gutman & Frank, went to the custom house with the view of Clark receiving his discharge. But in consequence of the condition in which Clarke was in, the officials declined to accept any money from Mr. Frank on his behalf. They left, and shortly thereafter Mr. Frank called again, but without being able to arrange the matter. On nearing Johnson street he was told by the master of the schooner that Clarke was dead, his body having just been taken out of the water where it was found between the wharves and the ship. How he go into the water none so far as known to the police can tell. The ferryman at the foot of Johnson street saw something in the water floating which proved to be a hat. The alarm was then given and the body recovered by Supt. Bloomfield, Mr. Jensen, of the Occidental hotel and others, assisting him. The remains were taken to Mr. Storey's undertaking establishment, Government street, where it was viewed by many who knew the deceased. Capt. Frank Worth conversed with him in the forenoon. Yesterday he saw him and found he was very despondent, not having heard from his wife lately. To Capt. Worth he stated that unless he heard from her to-morrow, meaning to-day, that would be the last of Clark. Capt. Worth urged him to come to his home and stay there for a time. He had been mate on the Alfred Adams with Worth; hence their friendship. Captain Worth feels the blow of his late mate's death keenly. Deceased brought the bark Abelarmo to Victoria from Liverpool last year. He was reported to be a capital navigator and a well educated person. He was 40 years age, a native of Glasgow, Scotland, where as already stated, his wife and family reside. At the hour of going to press it is not learned whether an inquest will be held or not.

It is now the belief that in attempting to board the ship Clark fell between the wharf and the ship's side.

Give Them a Chance.

That is to say, your lungs. Also all your breathing machinery. Very wonderful machinery it is. Not only the larger air-passages, but the thousands of little tubes and cavities leading from them.

When these are clogged and choked with matter which ought not to be there, your lungs cannot half do their work. And what they do, they cannot do well.

Call it cold, cough, croup, pneumonia, catarrh, consumption or any of the family of throat and nose and head and lung obstructions, all are bad. All ought to be got rid of. There is just one sure way to get rid of them. That is to take Boschee's German Syrup, which any druggist will sell you at 75 cents a bottle. Even if everything else has failed you, you may depend upon this for certain.

Fooling with Fire Arms.

Since the shooting season opened the woods in the neighborhood of Victoria have been full of amateur sportsmen, all of whom displayed a praiseworthy inclination to kill something. One Nimrod shot his own horse, which he mistook for a bear, and another knocked over a couple of speckled hens while laboring under the hallucination that they were a pair of pheasants. A few days ago a valuable rooster was mistaken for a cock pheasant, and to-day a disciple of Gutenburg made a bull's-eye on his big toe. The game law is certainly very imperfect when catastrophes of this kind occur, and we suggest that Mr. Vernon make another attempt to improve it.

Robert T. Lincoln having been interviewed on his willingness to accept a presidential nomination says "no" in just such a way as to mean "yes."
